The First Symptoms of Death.
Tired feeling, dull headache, pains in various parts of the body, sinking at the pit of the stomach, loss of appetite, lever-ishness, pimples or sores, are all positive evidence of poisoned blood. No matter how it became poisoned it must be puri-

Give the Children a Chance.
There is something radically wrong with the health of a child when it seems listless, has poor or no appetite, eyes sunk and with dark skin beneath.
In most cases showing these symptoms the child has worms, and all that it needs is some simple remedy, such as Hart's Worm Cream, to expel the worms, and the child will soon be in perfect health again. Parents, try it and let your little ones have a fair chance for life.

merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters

Remarkable Rescue.
Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles, found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as ever was.

Parents Criminally Liable.
More than half of all deaths occur be-every year. Parents are criminally responsible for this. The death rate of children in England is less than half this.

Acker's English Baby Soother has done more to bring this about than all other causes combined. You cannot afford to be without it.

Collecting Samples of Water.

It is surprising how many peculiar things a man will do when he has more time and money at his disposal than he knows what to do with.

Not long since two young Englishmen of fortune were traveling in this country. They visited many sections, and one day their conversation attracted the attention of a fellow traveler. A conversation in which all three joined followed.

"What is your destination?" was asked of the Englishmen.
"We scarcely know yet. But we are at present en route for the Mississippi river," replied one of them.

"Merely for the sake of getting a look at that mighty stream?"
"Well, no, not entirely. The truth is, we want some of the water from the Mississippi river."

"Want some of the water? What for?"
"To keep." And amused at the expression on his questioner's face, he continued: "You see, my friend, and self have a larger income than we can spend. We longed for something new, and together we decided to travel. We thought it would be more pleasant for both if we had some object in view, and we wanted to do something different from anybody else, so we concluded to make a collection of waters from all the principal rivers of the earth. We have visited Europe, Asia, Australia, South America, and now intend to visit North America. What are these collections for? Merely to gratify a whim of the collector, and we are doing that very thing. Already we have sent home many small vials, each labeled, so there can be no mistake, and when we do North America we will have finished the globe."

"How long do you intend to keep the collection?"
"Always, of course. Do you think we would carelessly destroy what has taken so long to collect?"

"Well, I scarcely think so, but do you intend to submit the waters to some chemist or other for analysis?"

"We hadn't thought of it. As I told you, we do this merely to pass the time, spend our money, see the world while we are young, and gratify a whim; and you may believe that so far we have had any amount of pleasure out of it."—Chicago Tribune.

"Sentence Day."
A young man only two years past his majority is at the bar. He is stout and healthy and well able to work at his trade of steam fitting, but he is idle and has only one ambition—to be leader of the "gang" of which he is a member. His face shows what his life has been. Deep lines mark his cheeks and brow. His eyes are deeply sunken and his hair is falling out. He looks as if he were continually on the watch for an officer of the law. He has been in jail several times, and has finally reached the grade of highway robber.
When he finishes his term of imprisonment he will be fitted for his long sought position of gang leader, and may thence be graduated, as Driscoll, McLain and others have been to the gallows. The recorder's voice is stern as he recites the facts of the young offender's crime.

"You and some of your companions, who unfortunately have not been arrested, met a young immigrant.
You succeeded by a trick in inducing him to show that he had some money.
Then you followed him and dragged him into a dark hallway. You and your companions assaulted him, knocked him down and robbed him of every cent which he possessed. The streets of our city cannot be safe while such men as you are at large. The sentence of the court is that you be imprisoned in the state prison at hard labor for the term of fifteen years."

The young thief, the product of the streets and of evil companionship, knew that he would lose caste if he showed the slightest emotion, and he smiles as he is led back to prison.— New York Tribune.

A Letter of Prince Albert.
In the second volume of his memoirs the Duke of Coburg makes certain disclosures of the deepest interest. Thus he writes:

"If it were desired to characterize the relations between my brother, the prince consort, and Lord Palmerston in general terms one might say that they were friendly to certain persons and things."

In this connection the duke quotes a letter from Prince Albert to himself, written toward the end of the year 1851, the year of the first international exhibition. In this episode the late prince consort writes:

"The year closes with an event fortunate for us—namely, that the man who has mattered our whole lives by constantly forcing us to the shameful alternative of either sanctioning his misdeeds all over Europe, or educating the Radical party here under his leadership into a power, or of getting into open war with the crown, and thus throwing the only country in which liberty, order and respect to law exist together into the general chaos—that this man has, as it were, cut his own throat. Give a rogue rope enough and he will hang himself; is an old English proverb with which we have sometimes tried to console ourselves, and which has once more proved true in this case. . . . We shall have all sorts of trouble with Palmerston, who is furious, and likewise with a reform bill which has been promised, and the right carrying out of which is of great importance to all Europe."

The Best Belt.
A mechanical engineer, writing about belting materials, advised me to select belts of a light color in preference to others. "The best belting," he writes, "has an unmistakeable light buff color, which indicates that it is not only all oak tanned, but that the leather has been thoroughly washed by the currier to remove all matter except the fiber. The light buff color also indicates that only the best quality of greases have been used; if the latter are of inferior quality they darken and impair the leather."

Goes without saying—the young man too bashful to put the question.

Mrs. A.—"What black eyes that baby has?"
Mrs. B.—"Yes his father is a pugilist."

Disease lies in ambush for the weak; a feeble constitution is ill adapted to encounter a malarious atmosphere and sudden changes of temperature, and the least robust are usually the easiest victims. Dr. J. H. McLean's Sarsaparilla will give tone, vitality and strength
